Data were collected through research on literature and references related to the ethics of enigma, the face of others, the idea of Emmanuel Levinas and a collection of sermons by Eka Darmaputera. From the results of the analysis and interpretation of the data, there are indications that: (1) the ethics of the enigma of other people's faces can be understood through three things, namely asymmetric relations, sensibility and responsibility, and the face as a trace of the Divine; (2) Eka Darmaputera's thoughts through his sermons were revealed to contain the ethical ideas of enigma on the faces of others, Emmanuel Levinas; (3) the offer of Christian ethics that can be implemented in today's church life.

From these findings, it is recommended that the church as a community is able to be able to see the problems that occur in the surrounding environment, both in the context of the congregation, society, nation and state. The ministry of the church is not only inward but also outward ministry. So that the church is able to visit each other in fellowship.
